3.78; (4) the promotion of transparency management in terms of rule of law with the Buddhist principles of three trainings – morality, concentration and wisdom - had the high level of a mean opinion at 3.69; (5) the promotion of transparency management in terms of participation with the Buddhist principles of three trainings – morality, concentration and wisdom - had the high level of a mean opinion at 3.63; (6) the promotion of transparency management in terms of responsibility with the Buddhist principles of three trainings – morality, concentration and wisdom - had the high level of a mean opinion at 3.61.

2. The Buddha's teachings, which can be suitably integrated to the good governance for promoting transparency in accordance with Buddhism for administration in the local government organizations consists of the principle of three trainings and the one of three right conducts, both of which can be practically applied into transparency management by the local government organization in terms of three individual domains: (1) rule of law (2) participation (3) responsibility.

3. The strategy of promotion and development of Buddhism - based transparency for encouraging the local government organizations to be an effectively administrative organization are subdivided into nine strategies: (1) the strategy of promotion of transparency with the principle of rule of law and honesty and determination; (2) the strategy of promotion of transparency in budgetary administration with the principle of rule of law and honesty and without corruption; (3) the strategy of promotion of transparency in human resource management with equality and impartiality; (4)) the strategy of promotion of transparency in administration with principle of responsibility, by carrying out right job progression; (5) the strategy of promotion of transparency with responsibility in budgetary administration for supporting and development of life; (6) the strategy of promotion of transparency with principle of responsibility in living together among human being, community and environment; (7) the strategy of promotion of transparency with the principle of participation, co-thinking and cooperation: (8) the strategy of promotion of transparency with the principle of participation in budgetary administration by honesty, integrity and with social benefit - oriented service mindedness; (9) the strategy of promotion of transparency with the principle of participation in personnel management, aiming to public service and social awareness.

Keyword : Strategy of promoting Transparency, Buddhist Administration